Hidden behind a mobile showroom, this ticket office rarely opens, but you can contact the dealers by phone. Druk Air currently has six weekly flights to Paro, on Mondays and Tuesdays (two flights).... Unless you are from a select few countries, such as India, Bangladesh and maldives, travel to Bhutan is expensive and not easy to make. However, the distinctive Buddhist culture, unspoiled landscapes and fresh mountain air make it very worthwhile. The number of people visiting Bhutan is increasing each year, reflecting the growing interest in the country as a tourist destination. Here's what you need to know to plan your trip. TripSavvy / Hugo Lin Bhutanese government is dedicated about allowing visitors into the country. Independent tourism to Bhutan is opening up but it is not something the government encourages. Generally, visitors to Bhutan must be tourists, or government visitors. The only other option to visit the country is to receive an invitation from a citizen of several stands or a volunteer organization. Except for passport bearer from India, Bangladesh and Maldives, all travelers must travel on a pre-planned, up-to-pre-paid, guided package tour or custom designed travel program. Everyone traveling to Bhutan is required to get a visa in advance, except for passport bearer from India, Bangladesh and maldives. Passport bearer from these three countries is classified as a regional traveler and can get a Free Entry Permit on arrival, when producing their passports with a minimum validity of six months. Indian citizens can also use their voter ID card. Citizens of these countries still pay a sustainable development fee of $17 per day. The exemption applies to tourists visiting 11 specific districts in eastern Bhutan, from Trongsa to Trashigang. The Bhutanese government is aiming to increase tourism in the region. For other passport bearer, the Sustainable Development Fee is $65 and is included in the minimum Daily Plan rate (see below). The visa cost is $40. Visas must be applied and paid in advance, from registered tour operators (not embassies), and book the rest of your trip. You should try to arrange your trip at least 90 days before traveling to have time for all procedures to be completed. included in the minimum package. The visa is processed through an online system by tour operators, and approved by the Bhutan Tourism Board once the full payment of the cost of the trip has been received. Tourists are issued a customs notice, which is presented upon arrival at the airport. The visa is then stamped in the passport. National Airport bhutan is located in Paro, about an hour's drive from Thimphu. Currently, the two national airlines operate flights to Drukair and Bhutan Airlines. Departure points include Bangkok (Thailand), Kathmandu (Nepal), New Delhi and Kolkata (India), Dhaka (Bangladesh), Yangoon (Myanmar) and Singapore. It is also possible to travel to Bhutan from India by road. The main gate is Jaigaon-Phuentsholing. There were two others, in Gelephu and Samdrup Jongkhar. The minimum price of the tour (known as a minimum daily package) to Bhutan is set by the government, to control tourism and protect the environment, and cannot be negotiated. The price includes all accommodation, meals, transportation, guides and porters, and cultural programs. Part of it also goes towards free education, free health care, and poverty alleviation in Bhutan. The minimum Daily Package price varies by season and the number of travelers in the group. Peak season: March, April, May, September, October and November $250 per person per day, for a group of three or more people.$280 per person per day, for a group of two.$290 per day for single individuals. Low season: January, February, June, July and August $200 per person per day, for a group of three or more people.$230 per person per day, for a group of two.$240 per day for single individuals. Discounts for children and students. Note that each tour operator has their preferred hotel. These are usually ones that cost less. Therefore, tourists should find out which hotels they have been specified, do some research on hotels in Bhutan on Tripadvisor and request hotel conversions if not satisfied. Most people claim that they are stuck with a fixed itinerary and the hotels are allocated to them. However, travel companies will in fact meet the requirements to continue doing business. Bhutan Tourist Corporation Limited (BTCL) highly recommends making travel bookings to Bhutan. The company is owned by members of the royal family and has been Bhutan's number one travel company since 1991. The drivers, guides, and accommodation offered are excellent. If you are interested in photography, see what Rainbow Photography Tours of Bhutan has to offer. The Bhutan Tourism Board also has a list of registered tour operators on its website. The Bhutanese currency is called Ngultrum (BTN) and its value is associated with the Indian Rupee. Indian rupees can be used as legitimate tenders in Bhutan, but Ngultrum is not legally bidding in India. There are a limited number of ATMs that the government lists here. Bhutan is changing rapidly with a lot of work going on, especially in Thimphu and Paro. As a result, these places have begun to lose their charm and authenticity. Guests are advised to fly internally from Paro to Bumthang, in the heart of Bhutan, to experience the Bhutanese tradition. If you are thinking of visiting Bhutan, it is better to go sooner rather than later! Read more: When is the best time to visit Bhutan?
